"It is all changed," was his only loon near Flushing, N. Y., a few days since. He rose to a heigth of 4500 feet. He passed through two layers of rain clouds, and became drenched to the skin, and then ascended to a range of white vapor clouds, which enveloped him as in a deep mist. On rising above them he opened into a broad sunlight, with the thermometer at freezing point. The sky was of a deeper blue than seen from the earth, and the white clouds below shone with a dazzling l ustre. His balloon was of a peculiar construction. By pulling a rope he opened a valve at the top three feet in diameter. The gas rushed out, and the air was drawn in from the Theck, seven friches wide, which in all balloons is always open. The lower part of the balloon then collapsed and struck upward, forming a mind of roof. His weight in the backet preervented a shrinkage at the upper party The weight of M. Chevalier made the balloon form a parachute, sad he descended with ease and

The New York Evening Post gives the following in relation to the arrest of smugglers among the passengers of the steamer Jave. from Liverpool, at Jersey Oity, a day or two ago : "In the trunks of two Germans, naturalized as Englishmen, a quantity of silver plate, watches and jewelry, was found wrapped in clothing and secreted in stockings. tooth-powder boxes, bear's grease pots, and found in the baggage of two ladies and two suboys, in pearl-powder, boxes, a quantity of rings were found, and a number were also hidden among folded gloves. The ladies were taken into a state-room by two women and re-ZA quired to disrobe. Quantities of bracelets, rings and brooches were found in their bodices and suspended in the folds of their skirts. The boys had also concealed articles of minor value. One of the men had fifty gold chains suspended round his neck, between his undershirt and shirt. The other had numerous and a rings in his pantaloons and vest pockets, and a nice quantity of bracelets in the skirts of his coat. but may prove to be worth about $50,000.

The jewelry seized has not yet been appraised. A Washington correspondent gives some State Department. Among other things the buseals of different countries are described: The seals are circular in form, like a gold coin, varying in size from a large to a small unflower. With the exception of England, the smaller the country the larger the seal. The seal of Great Britain is an immense affair, of solid silver, with heavy tassels of silver bullion attached. This silver case is hollow, and contains a cake of beeswax and sulphur, ingeniously mixed, but for what mortal purpose is forever locked up with the awful archives of the department in the breast of Assistant Secretary Hunter. The treaty is a thin book, velret-covered, with the stipulations written upon its parchment leaves in the neatest possible manner: The sentences are couched in language as polito as though dictated by Sir Charles Grandison, and are signed in Victoria's own hand. Victoria's writing is somewhat affected, but well enough in its way for a queen. Another woman's treaty lies beside Victoria's. It is from the hand of her sister queen, the ruler of Madagasear. It is written in precisely the same kind of book. It might have been borrowed for the occasion. but instead of aliver the treaty has attached to it a massive seal of solid gold. The Queen of quite as seen as we can complete the Blue

THE DAILY NEWS. Madagascar has signed her name, and like a school girl she has tried to do her best. Her long name, all in one word, was written each letter separate from its companion, completed evidently with an effort. One could almost see the pen faltering, hesitating in the tawny royal fingers. Next came a treaty signed in the clear, bold hand of Louis Philippe; and then followed divers others from various parts of the world. It was said but very few were on exhibition for the want of room, but were stored away for safety in some nook of the Orphan Asylum. The Queen of Madagascar finishes her treaty with a postcript, thereby prozing the woman is superior to the queen.

CHARLESTON.

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 8, 1869.

Our Northwestern Connections.

In our issue of yesterday morning, we informed our readers that the Atlanta Intelligencer, of Saturday, contained a telegram dated Cincinnati, 4th June, to the effect that the Common Council of that city had adopted a resolution in favor of the Chattanoogs route. This will be submitted to a popular vote on June 26, and we learn that the Attorney-General will test the constitutionality of the act under which this action is taken.

The announcement of the choice of Chattanooga has produced in our community a feeling of disappointment and depression. Democratic candidate for Congress from Ala-We share in the disappointment. But we feel that there is no cause for the depression, and we confess that we were not entirely unprepared for the result.

The advantages to Cincinnati of the direct Knoxville route were so manifest, that the fact that the Chattanooga route was being at all seriously considered, was conclusive evidence to us that there were influences at work entirely independent of, if not entirely antagonistic to, the true interests of that city. We had hoped that those influences, of whatever nature they might be. would not be sufficiently powerful to control the action of the Common Council and induce them to sacrifice the interests of their constituents. In this we have been mistaken. Fr Taker Shorts

.. It must, however, be borne in mind, that this action on the part of the Common Council is not final, and that the next step to be taken is to submit their resolution to a vote of the people. The influences that may have been brought to bear upon the Council may fail to exercise the same control over the people, and we look with confidence to them to reverse this decision.

The articles which we have republished from the Cincinnati papers, and the report of Mr. Lafitte, furnish evidence so conclusive of the paramount advantages to Cincinnati, and of the incidental advantages to ourselves, of the direct route to Knoxville, tion has already commenced. We heard on that we shall not enlarge upon this topic. What we desire is to convince the people of our city and State that even should the Chattanooga route be finally adopted, we should not relax one lots of our exertions to complete the Blue Ridge Railroad, at State prison is George Hunnewell, who has the earliest possible day, feeling entisfied been incarceracted twenty-one years. The that whatever may be the finel action of warden calle him the Rip Van Winkle of the institution. The other day, while the work-direct communication with both Cincinnati and Louisville; as soon as that road shall have been completed. It is true that the furnished with an opera glass, he made the connection will not be quite as short and as ascent. It was the first time he had looked direct as it would be were they to adopt the > OWR of their Lebanon branch to the State line of Tennessee, near Elk Gap, the northern terminus of the Knoxville and Kentucky Railroad. This branch is virtually completed to London, leaving only forty-five miles of road yet to be built. This portion of the road has been surveyed, and the estimated osst is $1,860,000. Of this sum, the City of Louisville, we are informed, has subscribed $1,000,000, to be paid as the work progresses. Of the Knoxville and Kentucky Road, nineteen miles remain to be built, at an estimated cost of $760,000. making a total of $2,110,000 as the probable cost of the roads to be built. The proposed road to Chattanooga crosses this line at Danville, and the distance from Cincinnati, to Kadeville, by this route, will be three.

hundred and fifteen miles. The advocates of the Chattanooga route have recently advanced as an argument, in favor of their route, that by building a branch road from Chitwood's to Elk Cap. a distance of only twenty-five and a half miles, they can reduce the distance from Cincinnati to Knoxville, by their route, to two hundred and hinety-six miles, or only twenty two miles more than by the proposed direct route; the distance from Cincianati to Knowlile, by the direct Knowlle. route, being two hundred and seventy four miles. We would add; that by this route; we would be brought somewhat nearer to Louisville than by any other. This advantage of Louisville will ultimately compel Cincinnati to build a road from Paris to London, which will give us precisely the" connection we have all along advectated.

We shall, however, not insist upon this point, as it is not essential to our purpose, our connections being sufficient without it. Taking these various routes; the distances between Cinvinnati and Charleston are as follows : O NO dies was dviene

By the Louisville Road via Danville +725 miles. By the Chattanooga route, adopted by the Common Council, and diverging at Chitwood's ..... 706 miles. By the direct route to Knozville. ... 684 miles. This proves, that so far as we are coucerned, the final adoption of the Chattanooga route will add only twenty-two miles to the distance between our city and Cincinnati. The connection with the interior of the State would be affected to the same extent and no more. The distance from

Charleston to Louisville would be somewhat less by the proposed Chattanooga route than by any other. The Chattanooga route, from Nicholasville (to which point the road is now in actual operation; ) to Chitwood's passes through a comparatively level country, and it is probable that the road to this point and thence to Elk Gap, as well as the Louisville Road from London to Elk Gap, will both be completed within two years, or Ridge Road. The real difficulties of the Chattanooga Road commence at Chitwood's, as from that point to Chattanooga it traverses a mountainous country, and at least four years will be required to complete it; but in that portion of the road we have no nterest whatever. It will thus be seen that, so far as we are concerned, the disadvantages of the Chat. anooga route, as recommended by the Com mon Council of Cincinnati, are limited to an increase of distance by one route of twenty-two miles, and by another of thirtynine miles, both of which will be built, while we shall make a small gain in the distance o Louisville.

The additional cost of the road to Chat anooga, including the branch from Chit wood's to Elk Gap, will exceed $4,000,000. and it will require over four years to com lete the road to Chattanoogs. These are serious disadvantages to Cincinnati, but hey in no way affect us.

In confirmation of these views, we print the following extract from a letter received by a gentleman of this city, from an old and highly respectable and intelligent merchant of Augusta, Georgia:

"I last night read with much pleasure the eport to the Mayor of the good old city, relative to the Blue Ridge Railroad. I am persuaded that the true interest of Carolina is, to push on to early completion this road, and to build it to Knoxville on as nearly an air-line as the character of the country will admit; this is the last hope of Charleston. I am in hope that the Ohio people will conclude to come direct to Knoxville, and if not now they will ultimately Charleston, I think, is entirely independent of them, and they will only seek that outlet (Charleston) because it is to their interest to do so; and this they will find out sooner or

"My object in writing is this: The people of the West are great upon a 'Gulf port' outlet to the great Gulf of Mexico, to command the trade of the West Indies and South America; and I suppose they are honest in the opinion that through Mobile or New Orleans this would be the case. You and I know quite the contrary, and this idea I wish you to elaborate to them. Charleston is much nearer to all the West India ports than Mobile or New Orleans the future value of the West Indies being, as think, in the islands, other than Cuba. The French and English possessions are vastly progressive, and under a well regulated system of Coolie labor, there is no telling what their product may be. British Guiana alone is capable of making sus ar to the extent of a million of hogsheads yearly. Now, suppose you wish ed to ship one thousand barrels of flour from New Orleans to Jamaica, Barbadoes, Trinidad. or Demerara on the main, or any other island except Cuba, or to any port on the South American coast, you have, after leaving New Orleans, to make the coast of Cuba, then cross there the Gulf stream north of Cape Florida then stand away to strike the trade winds, and your passage to Barbadoes is say twenty-six days; from Charleston it would be six, not more. You, or rather they, will say, steam must be used; well, it is too costly. It is true, a smart vessel might beat to windward, say south of Jamaica; by this she would be say sixteen days. Ask some of your old captains about this; I think the point worthy of being

In our opinion then the whole result may se summed up in a few words. Cincinnati acknowledges the commercial necessity of connection with Knoxville by proposing to build the branch road from Chitwood's to Elk Gap. Louisville is in a position to strike down at once and give us the same connection with that city that we should have had if Knoxville had been taken as the terminus of the Cincinnati line. Louisville can readily obtain the money to make her connection with Knoxville; Cincinnati wil be able to complete her road to Chitwood's and the branch to connect her with Kuoxville in two years' though it will require four to complete her road to Chattanooga: so that by the time we can complete the Bine Ridge Road, we shall have the short est possible connection with Louisville, and a connection with Cincinnati only twentywo miles longer than if Knoxville had been

This is shough for us, and proves the ecessity of going to work at once to comlete the Blue Ridge Road, as a railroad peanection that will, more than any other industrial undertaking, build up our city and State Our position is impregnable. and we are prepared to meet any arguments that may be advanced against it What we contend is, that the Knoxville route is the best for Cincinnati; but that whatever route may be adopted, South Carolina must reap an immediate profit, and scoure a trade whose value in a few years will be many millions of dollars.

THE NEW YORK HERALD CONSTRUCT the recent letter of Chief Justice Chase, on the econston of the memorial celebration over the graves of the Federal dead at Magno lia, as a mild but unmistakable bid for the next Presidency. The Herald evidently considers the Chief Justice as just the man to lead to victory the new and powerful party, the formation of which within the next year or two is regarded as a fixed fact.

Insurance.

YOU OUGHT TO INSURE IN THE CHARLESTON BRANCH LIFE ASSOCIATION

OF AMERICA. FOR THE FOLLOWING REASONS:

let. Because it is a home institution managed, and ontrolled by your own citizens. they are derived.

30. Because it is purely mutual; all policy holders share to its profits or earnings. Its large and moreasing assets belong exclusively to the policy holders.

creasing assets belong exclusively to the policy helders.

4th. Because its rates are I wer than those of most other companies. And its dividends will be larger. 5th. Because it invests its funds at rates of interest averaging ten per cent., while Eastern compinies rates average less than seven per cent. This makes the dividends of the association larger and the rates of premium smaller. One hundred dollars improved at six per cent. for fifty wars will amount to $1,850 ct. The same amount invested at ten per cent. will produce $1 TS 69. Difference in favo. of the ten per cent, investment $9,870 st.

6th. Because you ought to insure in a successful interest in the same amount averaged at well as its friends to be by far the most successful life insurance institution, and the Life association of a far the most successful life insurance institution of its age in the United States.
